MASTER'S DEGREE QUALIFYING EXAMINATION

Programs may require a qualifying examination. If required, the examination must be passed before a master's program/plan of study is filed with the Registrar. The department or school will notify students of the date, time, and format of the examination. Programs are required to maintain documentation of the student's examination results. With the approval of the advisor and the supervisory committee, if such exists, students may take the qualifying examination a second time.